Cover Girls

There are a lot of magazine covers out there waiting to be filled every month and we're proud to have contributed generously to the photogenic talent pool. The ladies in this section have caught the eye of photo editors everywhere and have leaped from PLAYBOY's pages onto the covers of dozens of specialty and general-interest books—and sometimes vice versa. We begin our salute with December '92 Playmate Barbara Moore, whose fabulous face and figure have graced so many periodicals and calendars that she's known around here simply, though unofficially, as The Cover Queen.

Priscilla Taylor

Centerfold appearances by Playmates Victoria Zdrok (October '94) and Priscilla Taylor (March '96) have spawned a flurry of modeling opportunities and landed each of them a bunch of magazine covers. Priscilla's ambition is to own a modeling agency. Victoria hopes to combine law and psychology degrees to explore areas where the two disciplines intersect.

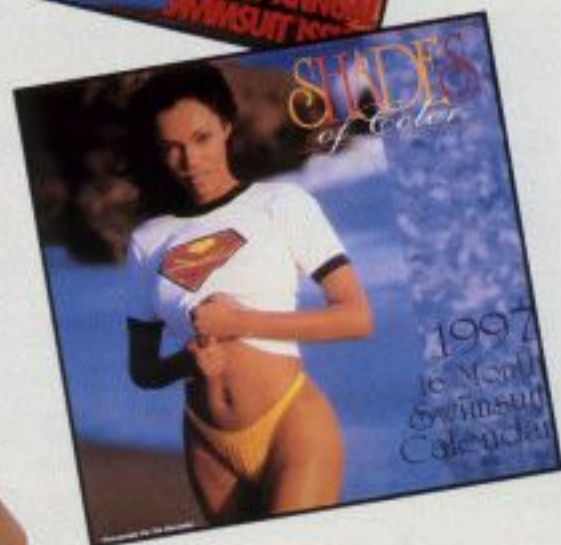

Debee Halo's exquisitely sculpted body had already been showcased on 15 magazine covers—including Ironman—before her August '96 PLAYBOY and December '96 Hardbodies NSS appearances. Elan Carter (overleaf), Miss June '94, is equally comfortable on a film set or in recording and photo studios. Her acting, singing and modeling careers have shifted into overdrive.

PLAYBOY regulars know Kim Paul from her nearly two dozen NSS layouts, but fitness buffs know her flexed pecs, glutes and abs from the covers of muscle books. "Thanks to all the coverage, I get recognized in the strangest places—even in the grocery store in my sweats and a ponytail."

Mary Lou Allgood not only played a small part in Howard Stern's Private Parts but she and the star are pictured on the inside cover of the film's soundtrack. What's the schlock jock really like? "He's so different from what I thought," she told us. "He was kinda shy and really nice." Songstress Janelle Christian solos on the cover of her CD, Piece of Mine, and hits all the right notes for us here.

She's appeared in more than a dozen Newsstand Specials since 1992, but 1997 has been a banner year for Cindy: she landed a part in Mike Myer's film Austin Powers and her calendars are among the most frequently downloaded on the Web.

Petra Verkaik

Here's an idea: Gather 11 of your favorite Playmates, take some gorgeous pin-up shots and put out a calendar called, well, Pin-Up Girls. Sound easy? Even if you're Petra Verkaik, it wasn't. "I maxed-out my credit cards and barely survived several disasters, but it turned out great." Check out a preview on these four pages. To order, write Petra at P.O. Box 10134, Beverly Hills, CA 90213-3134, hook up to her Web site, pinupgirls.com., or check with your local bookstore.

Our current Playmate of the Year's star is right on track: a slew of magazine covers, talk shows and her selection as the new Guess jeans model. She has her sights set on a TV hostess gig next.

Shane & Sia Barbi

As if the daily real-life adventures of the Barbi twins weren't exciting enough, a onetime comic version of their daring exploits was published by Topps Comics in 1995. March '88 Playmate Susie Owens was the model for the superheroine Flaxen and she still makes the rounds of comic book conventions in costume as her alter ego.

Frederick's of Hollywood

Frederick's and PLAYBOY have more in common than an interest in lingerie: The women of BOL form a natural model source for the foundation giant's catalogs. "We always know we'll do well with PLAYBOY models," said Anne-Marie Sullivan, Frederick's Art Director. "They're sexy and attractive, but also soft and acceptable. They're comfortable with themselves and their bodies. But most importantly, they bring a professional attitude and work ethic to the set. We will go to the PLAYBOY well again and again." Aficionados of both PLAYBOY and Frederick's of Hollywood can be grateful for the double exposure.

Venus Swimwear

"PLAYBOY and Venus share the same taste in women," Lou Maggio, Director of Venus Photography, told us. "We both prefer the girl next door, women whom our customers can relate to." The PLAYBOY/Venus relationship is a cooperative one—each steers potential models to the other—and Maggio can take credit for discovering at least six Playmates. "Both Venus and PLAYBOY look for unique beauty so that we achieve variety, the right blend in our publications. We're on the same wavelength." The ladies on the next 14 pages are perfect examples of that meeting of the minds.

British Calendar Girls

Five years ago our English contributing photographer, Byron Newman, was asked to create a promotional calendar for the Japanese engineering firm Mitutoyo. "Each year, the theme changed—yachts, airplanes, sports cars, motorcycles," Byron explained. "The shots are more stylized than those in the Newsstand Specials, more sophisticated, more state of the art, less spontaneous. But I used many of the same models I have worked with on NSS and they rose to the occasion beautifully. But then, we shot at some of the most beautiful locations in England, so it wasn't exactly a hardship shoot."
